SUPPLEMENT TO THE

South-Carolina GAZETTE.

[Numb. 1574.]

SATURDAY March 9, 1765.

CHARLES-TOWN, Printed by PETER TIMOTHY, at his Office, in BROAD-STREET.

Ubi enim aut ingenuis imparentur quam in patria; aut pudicitiæ conserventur quam sub oculis parentum, aut minore sumptu quam domi?—— PLIN.

Mr. TIMOTHY,

I APPLY to you, to offer to my countrymen, the few following observations on the education of our Youth, because I know your paper has a speedy and extensive circulation thro' the province; and I shall be much pleased, if these loose and unconnected thoughts could, in the least, contribute to promote so desirable an end. Indeed, from what I hear lately of the attention of our worthy representatives to this momentous affair, we shall have little else to do, but to join with every parish in the province, in offering our united and heartest thanks to them, for so carefully thinking of, and providing for this most laudable institution. A correspondent of Mr. WELLS's, from Granville county, has considered this matter only in one point of view, tho' I think, there are others, in which it must equally strike every parent; under some of which, I shall endeavour to point out it's peculiar advantages: And for that purpose, I have chosen the excellent sentiment of the elegant and noble Roman, which is prefixed to this paper, viz.

Where can our Children spend the season of Youth, more agreeable than in their native country? Where can they learn modesty and virtue, more properly than under the eyes of their parents? And where can they be supported at less expence than at home? ——

The situation of a son, so that he may be able to appear with honour and reputation, in whatever station of life his lot or genius may lead him to, is one of the most desirable ends which a parent can have in view; every time that the agreeable idea of his son's future success and character in the world presents itself to his mind, he dwells on it, and cherishes it with care and joy; still thinking on, and contriving the best method of cultivating his mind, in such manner, as to qualify him to the utmost of his abilities and opportunities. If to be able to accomplish this, he finds it necessary to send his son to some foreign country, to acquire such a share of education as his native country cannot afford, he must immediately perceive a great proportion of his happiness once cancelled: A parent's joy and happiness in his children, do not arise entirely from the prospect only of what they may be, but are greatly enhanced by his being an eye-witness to their gradual advances in improvements. Every fresh step and additional attainment which the child makes, gives as it were new hitherto unfelt and distinct joys to the parent's heart; and from the sensible impression of these trifling steps and new acquirements, he anticipates in his mind the agreeable prospect of what his son will one day be in the stage of life: This may be truly called a continual feast to a parent's mind; but how much must this be increased, when we add to it the happiness which naturally arises, from the parent's being the immediate superintendant of the moral conduct of his child's youth. Masters may indeed make him learned, but cannot make him so without making him good; the united effects of the parental care, and the virtuous diligence of skilful masters, seldom, nay cannot ever, fail to produce men, who will be the stay of the widow, the support of the orphan, the patrons of virtue, the comfort of the parent's declining years, and the ornaments of their country: This view of the matter, will naturally lead a man to think of the propriety and necessity of having his children educated under his own eye.

Was I then to allow, that a Youth might have advantages of instruction in a foreign country, more than what he can have at home, for the improvement of his knowledge in these things, yet I think, I should never be for sending my son abroad in that respect, when I have the full satisfaction of seeing my son educated under my own eye, and cultivating the paths of knowledge and virtue, in the company and conversation of those with whom he was at once to practise the moral duties and offices of life: forming firm friendships with those who were to spend their days, to live with and accustomed to that climate under which he was to live, and to those laws by which he was to be governed: It is impossible to imagine, that the good effects of these combined, would not more than counterbalance any advantage whatever, that could be reaped from a foreign education; and shall only say further, that besides the above consideration, brought to show the utility and advantage of having a proper seminary of learning amongst us, there is still another argument that will, no doubt, weigh much with the article of expence. It would, perhaps, be no difficult matter to prove, that no less than £. 50,000 sterling, has been sent out of this province within these thirty years past, for the purpose of education; and that there is more now annually spent in Great-Britain, for that purpose, than £. 2000 sterling, the greatest part of this sum, if we had a well established College, might be annually saved to the province, and very probably, our Youth much the better likewise: Besides, I cannot see nor devise any thing that should prevent us, from procuring in time, as able, as careful, and as successful Teachers, as there are in any part of Europe.

This is a subject, Mr. TIMOTHY, on which some of my neighbours and I often converse; I will in some future papers, give you occasionally the result of our thoughts thereon, if it will be agreeable.

I am Yours, &c.

WILLIAMSBURG, in Virginia, December 14.

A caution to be considered as one of the standing ordinances that will preserve the remembrance of the year 1765, down to the latest posterity.

IT has been a practice, almost time out of mind, with traders and planters in this colony, to remove by water from one port or district to another, effects (that cannot be comprehended within the forbidden words of a fraudulent or contraband trade) without calling at the office of the port, from whence, or to which, they transport the goods, for proper permits; but from a recent, notable instance, it seems to be necessary to admonish all traders and others, that every commodity found under such a circumstance will be seized, by authority derived from the parliament for that purpose, however delaying and expensive such a measure may prove to the honest man who gets his bread by oysters or oyster shells, or that trades only in commodities not subject to any duty by any law whatever, or to the planter that removes things of his own growth from one plantation to another, situated on different rivers or districts.—They all will, it is hoped, be thankful for this caution, and with duty submit, as children do to rods exercised by cruel and incensed parents. Time, which has brought many (once) unlikely things to pass, may mature every little state of infancy, into a robust and more manly condition; and then perhaps some parents will judge it convenient to relax into a more natural family connexion, for it is of divine truth, that kingdoms divided against themselves cannot stand; and in the histories of imperial travels, we read that cruelty and severity have produced their several evils, as well as luxury.—The honest admonition of one who is,

Et patriæ & patriæ fidelis servus.

PHILADELPHIA, December 24.

Monday last Capt. Atwood arrived here in but three days from Halifax; by the papers we learn, that all the Neutrals, (so called) consisting of between 5 and 600, except 4 or 5 families who have taken the oath of allegiance, have embarked on board vessels for Cape-Francois. They had a weekly allowance in that province of provisions, the same as soldiers, in hopes of their becoming subjects of Great-Britain. Their removing is felt by the inhabitants in the extraordinary rise of wood there, which they used to cut and supply the town with.

Some time since a number of Neutrals sailed from this province for the Cape; but it is imagined, that many of them will not be able to endure a climate so different from their own.

We hear the Rev. Dr. MAYHEW is chosen to preach the Dudleian lecture at Harvard college in May next; the subject to be, for the detecting, and convicting, and exposing the idolatry of the Romish church, their tyranny, usurpations, damnable heresies, fatal errors, abominable superstitions, and other crying wickednesses in their high places; and finally, that the church of Rome is that mystical Babylon, that man of sin, that apostate church spoken of in the new-testament.

Wednesday last the Rev. Mr. SAMUEL STILLMAN, A.M. late of Charles-Town, South Carolina, was installed pastor of the first Anti-pedobaptist Church in this town; the Rev. Mr. CONDY having resigned. The gentlemen who officiated on this occasion, were the Reverend Messrs. PEMBERTON, ELLIOT, COOPER, and CHECKLEY, jun. Mr. Stillman gave the auditory a suitable discourse upon those words of St. Paul—Helpers of your joy. Mr Condy took leave of his church and congregation with an affectionate address.

Bridgewater, in New England, January 14.

Died here Joseph Pratt, aged 99 years and 11 months; a man of a good character and profession; who had twenty children by his first wife, but none by his second, who still survives him, being about 90 years of age.

BOSTON, JANUARY 28.

Thursday last the great and general court of this province, made choice of Richard Jackson, jun. Esq; of London, to be agent for the province at the court of Great-Britain, in the room of Jasper Maudut, Esq; who had resigned that trust on account of his ill state of health.

NEW-YORK, JANUARY 28.

Our weather, which had been very severe here for weeks past, whereby our navigation was in great part stopt, was so promising for the better the forepart of last week, that on Wednesday last between twelve and twenty sail of vessels, after a great struggle with the ice, got out of the harbour, and push'd away to sea. A few days before, a sloop, Capt. Leonard, outward bound, carried off one of our pilots, Mr. William Vandril, because the captain could not avoid it in a high gale, when he got to the Hook.—But on Friday evening last, Andromeda, (our northern constellation) about six o' clock in the evening, gave us another attack in an instant, so severe as to oblige many boats going hence over the bay, to return to port; others jamm'd in the great quantities of ice then driving, left to mercy, of whom we can learn but of one that with great difficulty reached Long Island, after attempts had been to no effect made from the city to relieve them. The next day five sea vessels attempted to squeeze out, notwithstanding the continuance of the gale, and increase of ice; among which was the Harriot packet boat, Capt. Robinson, with the mail for Falmouth; but she, like the rest, was forced back; and, indeed, this last blast has put a total stop to navigation here for the present, our pilots, it is said, refusing to take charge of any vessel downwards, till the weather moderates, and our rivers are more clear of ice; our bay indeed of nine miles over, being near blocked up, the ice having scarce any drift.

NEWPORT, February 4.

The navigation of this port has not received so much obstruction by ice since the year 1740, as it has for about a week past; but it is now considerably broke away, though it still continues froze from the lower part of the town over to the fort.

NEW-YORK, February 4.

It seems to be the general opinion, that the weather has not been so severe in this place for twenty, some say forty years past; and though the cold on the 31st of December, and first of January last, was very remarkable, yet it has been more intense since that time, as appears by the following observations by Farenheit's thermometer, &c. communicated by the gentlemen of King's College, in this city.

1764. Dec. 31. At 7, A. M. in a close north room, the mercury stood at 11 Deg.
On opening the windows it fell to 8
1765. Jan. 1. At 7 A. M. in a close room 1
Open room the mercury sunk all into the ball.
This afternoon several glasses of Madera and red Port wine, froze to the bottom in fourteen minutes, and some less.
And water froze visibly in three seconds of time.
12. Near midnight in an open room mercury at 1
Saturday 28. At 5 o'clock P. M. close room it fell into the ball, and continued so till 6 o'clock on Tuesday morning, which was 57 hours.

During this time it appear'd by several experiments that the air was six degrees colder than was sufficient to sink the mercury in the ball.

BOSTON, February 7.

The Hon. Samuel White, Esq; speaker of the honorable house of representatives, being necessarily absent, by reason of sickness, the house on monday last made choice of the Hon. James Otis, jun. Esq; to be speaker pro tempore for the present session, and during the absence of their speaker.

We hear that the French Neutrals (so called) who went from those parts last fall, to Cape François, have been unable to endure the heat of the weather there, so different from the climate which they had heretofore lived in: That many died soon after their arrival, and it was thought but few would survive the mortality that raged among them.

SAVANNAH, (in Georgia,) FEBRUARY, 21, 1765.

Last Sunday the Rev. Mr. GEORGE WHITEFIELD took a solemn and affectionate farewell of a very crouded auditory in our church, who appeared truly sensible of the many and great obligations this province has from its infant state lain under to that worthy gentleman. Early yesterday morning he went by water to Purrysburgh, in his way to Charles-Town, accompanied by some gentlemen of this place, having before his departure discharged all arrears due on account of the orphan-house, placed out all the children, except two or three, who are yet too young to go abroad, had the accompts of that house audited, and put it in readiness for the reception of future officers and students of the intended college. And as the orphan-house has now ceased, and it must give all generous minds real pleasure to know with what disinterested views that institution has been carried on, we have obtained an authentic copy of the last and final audit of the whole receipts and disbursements on that account, with which we present our readers.

BEFORE me, the Hon. Noble Jones, Esq. Senior Assistant Justice for the province aforesaid, personally appeared James Edward Powell and Grey Elliott, Esqrs. Members of his Majesty's Hon. Council for the province aforesaid, who being duly sworn, declare, that they have carefully examined the accounts containing the receipts and disbursements for the use of the orphan-house in the said province, and that, comparing them with several vouchers, they find the same not only just and true in every respect, but kept in such a clear and regular manner as does honour to the managers of that house; and that, on a careful examination of the several former audits, it appears that the sum of two thousand and sixty-four pounds five shillings and ten pence has at several times been given by the Rev. Mr. George Whitefield for the use of the said house, and that in the whole the sum of twelve thousand eight hundred and fifty-five pounds five shillings and four pence three farthings sterling has been laid out for the said house since the 7th January 1738-9 to this day: Also that it does not appear that any charge has ever been made by the said Rev. CHARLES-TOWN, MARCH 9, 1765.

THE 27th ult died of an apoplectick fit, at Augusta in Georgia, Mr. Nicholas Calhoil, than whom perhaps few there ever were more regretted; for, though he was not without a fault, yet was he poſſeſſed of many virtues, ſuch as, honour and honeſty, a forgiving temper, and a heart full of tenderneſs to the diſtreſſed, whom he always liberally relieved and aſſiſted; he was alſo an affectionate huſband, tender parent, and kind maſter. His remains were interred the 28th, with all the honours the place would admit. From the time of his deceaſe to the interment of his corpſe, the flag at Mr. Macartan's fort was hoiſted half ſtaff, and minute guns were fired there, for an hour and an half, during the funeral proceſſion. The pall-bearers, &c. wore linnen ſcarfs and cambrick hatbands, agreeable to the laudable cuſtom in Ireland on ſuch occaſions.

QUESTION.

WHAT will be the head diameter, internal length, and content in wine gallons, of a cylindrical caſk, whoſe diagonal, as commonly taken by the gauging rod, is 36 inches, when made to contain the greateſt quantity poſſible.

Likewiſe, the internal length and diameter of a cylindrical caſk, having the ſame diagonal, and that ſhall contain but half the quantity of the greateſt.

Rapin, in his reflections upon the eloquence of the Pulpit, has drawn Mr. WHITEFIELD, in a French orator, to the life: only, inſtead of not tuneable, we all know, he had a charming voice.

FATHER Deitrgandes had the moſt natural diſpoſition for eloquence, that has ever fallen under my obſervation: His perſon was well-made; he had a becoming modeſty and gravity, an agreeable aſpect, and every thing that is either great or graceful in his appearance: He gain'd reſpect and deference by paying the ſame to his hearers; his voice was not the moſt bright and tuneable, yet had it's fulneſs, and compaſs, and ſtrength, and ſomewhat ſo very taking, as to engage the greateſt earneſtneſs of attention, whenever he began to ſpeak. The endowments of his mind were every way anſwerable to theſe outward advantages: He had a deep penetration and exquiſite underſtanding, a ſtrong reaſon, and eaſy apprehenſion, a fine imagination, and ſolid judgment: His learning conſiſted in a perfect knowledge of divinity, in which he was ſuperiour to moſt profeſſors, and which enables him to ſpeak deciſively, and with true weight of all the points that came before him: To this knowledge in theological ſtudies he had join'd an exact acquaintance with the fathers, whom he made uſe of with ſo happy and familiar addreſs, as if they had written only for his ſervice. But nothing ſo much rais'd the luſtre of theſe excellent qualities, as that admirable gift of eloquence, which he employed with ſo much ſucceſs in fixing what impreſſions he pleas'd upon men's minds, by the turn he gave to every thing he ſaid. The parts ſo well ſupported each other in the whole chain of his reaſonings, that thoſe which follow'd were always ſtronger than thoſe which went before; and, beſides that his arguments were thoroughly good and ſolid, and had nothing falſe, nothing wide or foreign from his purpoſe, the power of his diſcourſe ſeem'd gradually to increaſe, ſo as to ſtrike with much greater force towards the end than at the beginning. In a word, his true talent was fully to convince the underſtanding, and yet more ſtrongly to influence the will. His whole ſermon was a wonderful illuſtration of his ſubject; and after he had caſt into the ſoul the ſeed of thoſe motions that he deſign'd to raiſe by his abundant and overflowing ſenſe, he then ſet all its ſprings on going by the ſeveral engines that he thought capable of working it into any temper; at the ſame time inflaming the heart with all the ardour and vehemence of the affections, of which he was a great maſter, by the help of a peculiar rhetorick that he had fram'd to himſelf. It was then that the company began to hear him with a new pleaſure, while the charms of his eloquence let him ſecretly into their good opinion; and they never ſo eagerly wiſh'd he might proceed, as when he was upon the point of concluding. For this was the time that he made his entrance upon their hearts, and rendered them at his abſolute diſpoſal. He had the gift of this pathetical way of perſuaſion in ſo eminent a degree, that I have known Libertines who forbore his ſermons, for fear of being oblig'd to to yield to the force of his arguments; for barely to hear him was to be his priſoner at diſcretion. Yet nothing ſpoke ſo loud in his praiſe, as the profound ſilence of his auditor's when he ended his diſcourſe. One might ſee them riſing from their ſeats with fix'd eyes, and with paleneſs and dejection in their countenance, [illegible] of the Church penſive and concern'd,

Anecdote of OLIVER CROMWELL.

MR. Jeremy White, one of Oliver Cromwell's domeſtic chaplains, a ſprightly man, and one of the chief wits of the court, was ſo ambitious, as to make his addreſſes to Oliver's youngeſt daughter, the lady Frances. The young lady did not diſcourage him; but in ſo religious a court, this gallantry could not be carried on without being taken notice of. The Protector was told of it, and was much concerned thereat: he ordered the perſon who told him to keep a ſtrict look-out, promiſing, if he could give him any ſubſtantial proofs, he ſhould be well rewarded, and White ſeverely puniſhed. The ſpy followed his buſineſs ſo cloſe, that in a little time he dogged Jerry White, as he was generally called, to the lady's chamber, and ran immediately to the Protector, to acquaint him that they were together. Oliver, in a rage, haſtened to the chamber; and going in haſtily, found Jerry on his knees, either kiſſing the lady's hand, or having juſt kiſſed it. Cromwell, in a fury, aſked what was the meaning of that poſture before his daughter, Frank? White, with a great deal of preſence of mind, ſaid, May it pleaſe your highneſs! I have a long time courted that young gentlewoman there, my lady's woman, and cannot prevail: I was therefore humbly praying her ladyſhip to intercede for me. The Protector, turning to the young woman, cried, what's the meaning of this buſſy? why do you refuſe the honour Mr. White would do you? he is my friend, and I expect you ſhould treat him as ſuch. My lady's woman, who deſired nothing more, with a very low courtſy, replied, if Mr. White intends me that honour, I ſhall not be againſt him. Say'ſt thou ſo, my laſs, cried Cromwell? call Godwyn: this buſineſs ſhall be done preſently, before I go out of the room. Mr. White was gone too far to go back; his brother perſon came; Jerry and my lady's woman were married in the preſence of the Protector, who gave her 500l. for her portion, which, with the money ſhe had ſaved before, made Mr. White eaſy in his circumſtances, except that he never loved his wife, nor ſhe him, though they lived together near 50 years afterwards.
